PERIPATETICO.

OF HOUSE DECORATION

Everybody knows how incomplete are the houses we live in, even after the last brick is laid, the last coat of paint hardened, and the walls decorated in paper or fresco. Even after the carpet layer and the upholsterer have done their work and the butcher, baker, and candlestick-maker beconcludes he must have pictures to adorn his walls, and the presiding feminine genius reflects that she must take unto herself some of the thousand and one elegant little trifles which cover the tables and etagères of good society. This fiat having gone forth, woe unto artistic eyes if good taste desert the heads of the family in their shopping tour, for dire will be their aching when the selections shall reach their appointed places! "Good taste," once said a friend of the Peripatetic, "is a thing to be prayed for," and, the Peripatetic would add, in no case more devoutly than in that of house beautifying. That the colors and patterns of floors and walls shall harmonize; that heavy frescoes or paper shall not be permitted in low, dark rooms, or a light room be rendered glaring by bright or high tinted paper are rules which everyone presumably knows; the greatest room for faulty taste is in the choice of the smaller adornments. The Peripatetic once visited a worthy old sometime afterward remarked, apropos of some sentiment, "most true indeed is it, my dear, that there is no place like home." "No," said the Peripatetic sweetly and wickedly, "it must indeed seem so to you," for the recollection of those oil paintings of impossible scenes in worse than hideous cultivated in any person sunfecting young. He considers that unless the musical facility and the considers that the consideration and th culated to craze a geometrical mind, the ing a maroon chair, gave irresistible point All things else being in accord, let us then will wear well, and then, if the purse is not long, have it simply and tastefully framed.

A good photograph in a passe-partout is better than a daub in a massive gilt frame.

Bare spaces upon walls, too, are to be deprecated, but they are preferable to poor piccated, but they are preferable to poor pictures. To get the best is always economy and especially in home furnishing. Taste almost always improves with time and observation, and the things that you tolerate at first because they "fill up" grow a weariness and a burden later on. Further, there against good taste than in the so called and dragons of brilliant colors and dubious entomology and the average American woman will make you a table-spread to be contrite over. Coffee sacks have been considered artistic objects, and a blacking bottle or earthern jar of long standing and plebethe unnatural objects with which we fill our rooms. It is an accepted rule that nothing which pretends to be something it is not, can be of itself either artistic or beautiful, and the same can be said of the mixture of coarse, cheap fabrics with silk and velvet which has become so common. No ordinary article or texture can be made to fill the place of, or look like an elegant one.

A beautiful house has its charms for every one, old and young alike feeling the deery one, old and young alike feeling the delight to be taken in pretty things. A small tracts. The writer takes Scott as a standperson of five years had a devouring affection for the beauty of a china dinner set, and evinced the same by remarking, in view of a near festival, "Fanksgivin' is the day we praise the Lord and have the broon in tracts. The Atlantic for December opens with the conclusion of Mr. Norton's article upon "Florence and St. Mary of the Flower, which, in order of arrangement, precedes a story, taking one back to the Atlantic of a dozen years since—"The Other Fellow," by J. W. De Forest. Not that Mr. De Forest's contributions have been unknown to the public; but one involuntarily turns back to see if they indeed hold the well known moving and exclamatory; so different as well from the quiet, decorous tales habitual to the pages of late. The moral thereof dis-plays the bad end to which a senator, who spends his time in lobbying a railroad bill through Congress, may come.

Mr. Howells' "Lady of the Aroostook" has four more chapters, in which characters gradually unfold themselves, and we learn sbmething more of the heroine's attainments and disposition, which Mr. Howells had artistically hidden, as much from the reader as from the other personages in the story. "Saving versus Spending" is the title of a practical article upon the present hard times, and the causes which may brighten them. Mr. Crocker points out how, in time of war, work was plenty and production immense and therefore, when peace was restored, everything was prepared for an unproductive consumption. Facilities for gaining wealth were, however, multiplied, and consequently the markets were flooded and competition increased, until our unproduc-tive consumption was greatly diminished.

This trouble, however, is beginning to be alleviated by the calls upon us from Euro-pean nations, and now the machinery of production is employing more and more la-borers, so that it is to be hoped that we 'shall have once more a busy and happy people." Some parallels are drawn from the experience of the Dutch und English, and the final conclusion is that we may benlady of exceedingly diversified ideas, who effit the general state of things, not, as has sometime after yard remarked, appropos, of often been taught, by a rigid saving, but by a moderate enjoyment and consumption of he good things of life Richard Grant White discourses upon "The Nature of Music," and combats, in his usual aggressive style, the idea that a taste for music may be cultivated in any person sufficiently young. frames, the rainbow carpet with figures cal- quired; and further that the most mean and sordid soul possible may be as truly a music lover as the most noble and heroic one wall paper of discordant hues, and worst of all the brilliant scarlet tidy placidly crown-sensation. "Sheridan at Winchester" was written by Major B. W. Crowninshield, who was with General Sheridan through the Shenandoah valley campaign and in that All things else being in accord, let us then spend our money for the best things. Never buy a picture because it is handsomely framed, but first select the best picture, one that, like Mrs. Primrose's wedding gown, "Three Typical Working Men," as its title implies, contains sketches of three New England-born men, and their different feekings of meking or marring their way in fashions of making or marring their way in the world. The Westminster Review for the current quarter comes to hand with its usual varieness and a burden later on. Further, there ty of contents. At the present time an is no more crying sin oftener committed English magazine would scarcely be itself without some discussion of the Eastern "fancy work." The Turkish toweling mathe of "The Situation in the East and the nia has many things to answer for, since in future of Russia." The writer has no doubt its name many grievous things have been as to the ultimate intentions of the Russian voernmentg as regards the overthrow of done. Given a piece of the aforesaid material and various woolen butterflies, bugs, of time before the struggle must come, and it is the testimony of a prominent native of Afghaniscan that "if once the Muscovites had succeeded in lodging themselves in that rocky bastion, which at present serves as a protection to English dominion in India, it would be utterly impossible to dislodge them again." Some account is given of the horrible atrocities committed under the ian origin, when pasted over with prilliant pictures, is regarded as a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Wax flowers, now, happily, going out of fashion, have also been among in the opening of new railroads in India in the opening of the growing severity of the proving discussed, and the growing severity of Russian rule commented upon. Another possession of England—"The Australian Colonies"—is described at length, the first settlement, climate and habits of the people having each their share of attention

The literary reader will turn with pleasure to a review of the later works of Auerbach, which, beginning with "On the Heights," takes in everything from the fertile pen of that writer, including the triad of stories under the title of "After Thirty Years," published in 1876. The review is written with lacking their alliteration. The subjects are wild, strange legends, in which spirits of air and earth play a prominent part.

The report of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada for the six months ending June 30, which has just been made public, shows that the gross earnings, after deducting the loss in American currency, were $881,003, against £860,386 for the corresponding period in 1877. The operating expenses were £667,258, against £664,467, leaving as net earnings £213,750 against £195,919, for the same period last year, a gain of £47,831. There have been spent during the half year, £20,440 extra for repairs and renewals of way and rolling stock, and there has been a reduction in the ordinary charges of running engines, traffic department, etc., of £17,654, which makes the increased charge £2,800. There bas been an addition to the perpetual 5 per cent. debenture stock of £1,349,959, but this has been more than equalized by absorption of various preferential securities to the extent of £1,363,222.

Pigeons.

Most breeders of poultry, sooner or later, add a few choice varieties of pigeons to their collection of pets, and generally find it pays well to do so, aside from the pleasure they are sure to afford to any one at all fond of the small kinds of live stock. Raising them in large numbers requires considerable care and attention, besides ample accommodations, while experience is also necessary to make success assured. The most popular breed is, undoubtedly, the Fantail, for it is found in almost every collection, though the average price for it is not very high. Its beauty, handsome carriage and proud ways —when well bred—are sure to command attention at the hands of breeders. The Pouters, Tumblers, Duchesse, Swallows, Owls, Trumpeters and others, go to make up the very long list, while at the head, undoubtedly, are the Carriers, some of these selling at very formed in the prominent eastern cities and elsewhere for flying them, and to encourage their breeding, and the great interest now manifested in them is rapidly on the increase. Michigan for 1873 was 15,000,000 bushels; for 1876, 16,000,000 bushels, and for 1877, 23,000,000 bushels. We estimate the crop of 1878 at 28,000,000 bushels. A majority of all this wheat has been shipped from the State. It was grown from the soil of the state and very little of its fertilizing power has been returned or restored to that soil. Portions of other crops have gone in the same way. The corn crop, the oat crop, the grass crop, the root crop have in part been returned to the soil, but it is true that a large portion of all crops are shipped from the State. The aggregate, thus taken from the soil, and shipped abroad, is simply immense. This process of growing crops and shipping them away is constantly going on. If it was not for the counter policy of restitution and restoration the state would soon become very poor, or, to use an expressive phrase, "run out." The lesson of the wheat map should be enforced upon the mind of every citizen, and that is—"pay back that which you take." Restore back the elements and constituents which you take from the soil. This is what stantly going on by the secret processes of nature. If left to man, mother earth would soon be stripped and robbed of all fertility. The atmosphere is a great feeder of soils and is constantly making up for the westerned ly making up for the waste and extravagance and greed of the tillers of the soil. There is that in the soil itself which will sustain a large drain upon its resources. Cultivation sets free many of the constituents of the soil and gives a chance for atmospheric change and power. With these natural agencies for restitution and restoration, the husband-man should not fail to co-operate. This he can do in various ways and by various means. One powerful means is the feeding of crops to stock, or the marketing of crops in the shape of beef, pork, poultry, lard, tallow, etc. It is difficult to do this with wheat, for this grain is intended for human and Further particulars of the attempted assassination show that the King struck the assassin on the head with his sheathed sword immediately on being attacked. The Electric Light. Several of the wider streets and squares, and about forty workshops in and about Paris, are now regularly lighted by electricity. The avenue leading from the Grand Opera House is lighted throughout its entire length, and presents a good example of street lighting. The lamps are placed on posts, precisely like the gas lamps, except that the posts are taller and wider apart. The lamps are inclosed in large cpal glass globes, and beyond this do not differ externally from the gas lamps. As the daylight fades away, there comes, without warning, a sud-den flash, and every light in the street is burning with an intense white glare. The effect is like daylight, except in intensity. Every stone in the road is plainly visible, and the horses move swiftly along as if confident of their footing. Such illumination is the perfection of street lighting. The appearance of the lamps used in Paris is peculiar. The entire globe seems to be filled with light,—no flame or point of light being visible. The color is intense white, occasionally changing to blue or deep yellow for an instant. In some few cases the light is naked, or s placed in clear glass lamps. Amateur Pigeon Flying.

We clip the following amusing article from the Cleveland Herald:

Considerable interest of late has been evinced in the subject of carrier pigeons and their exploits, and Cleveland is not entirely free from the fever. Every day several of these birds are shipped here from Niles and started home again from the St. Clair street entrance of the Kennard House. "Buff," of the billiard room, is the man who receives and engineers the birds. Among the many traveling men who make the Kennard House their headquarters when in this city, is H. A. Earle, representing the firm of A. T. Stewart & Co. of New York City. Earle is a very stylish young man of an inquiring turn of mind, and one who is apt to grow enthusiastic on all subjects in which he becomes interested. Saturday, when "Buff" loosed his pigeons for Niles, among the large crowd who witnessed the setting out was Earle. He inquired if there were any more of the pigeons here, and was informed that "Buff was well stocked, as was also his friend Chief Bennett, who owned about 500. Earle then stated that he was going to Buffalo Saturday night and would like to carry is meant by the art and science of agriculture. This restoration is constantly going on by the secret processes an immense interest in the affair, and promised to secure him a couple from Chief Bennett. Saturday evening the fastidious Earle filed out at the Kennard House door, bearing on his shoulder a peach crate large enough to contain fifty birds, and marched off down to the boat landing, followed by a parting suggestion from Chief Bennett that he wouldn't have one of those birds injured for $500, and that he had never before let them go away from home unless some of the family went along. Carefully depositing the peach crate in his stateroom on the steamer Earle paid the steward $1 to care for the birds and see that they were not stolen. He was to let the birds go on Sunday from the roof of the Tifft House in Buffalo and at the same time to notify Buff by telegraph of their starting.

Earle departed by the boat, and that night's train bore from Bennett a note to the clerk of the Tifft House telling him of Earle's coming.

Sunday afternoon a little after 3 o'clock the following telegram was received at the Kennard House: "BUFFALO, Sept. 1

Buff, care Kennard House:
Raised birds at 12. Strong wind blowing
H. A. EARLE." against them. "Buffalo, Sept. 1.

Earle sitting on top Tifft House. Let birds out at 12. They are sitting on church on opposite side waiting for feed. E. TUTHILL."

The two jokers had furnished Earle with a common blue pigeon and a fantailed tumbler, whose highest aspirations had been the roof of the barn where it lived, and whose furthest flights were confined to the nearest garbage barrel in the back yard near No. 1's engine house. In spite of the fact that they looked no more like a carrier pigeon than a game cock, the confiding Earle had seen them nailed into the peach crate with much admiration of their fine points.

MRS. GAY'S PRESCRIP-TION.

By Louisa M. Alcott.

Bang, bang, went the front door, as Mr. Bennett and the boy hurried off to store and school, leaving Mrs. Bennett to collect her wits and draw a long breath after the usual morning flurry.

The poor little woman looked as if she needed rest, but was not likely to get it, for the room was in a chaotic state, the breakfast table presented the appearance of having been devastated farther worry and expense and sufferby a swarm of locusts, the baby began to fret, little Polly set up her usual whine of "I want sumpin to do," and a pile of work loomed up in the corner waiting to be done.

"I dont see how I shall ever get through it all," sighed the despondent matron as she hastily drank a cup of tea, while two great tears rolled down her cheeks, as she looked from one puny child to the other, and felt the weariness of her own tired soul and body door, a step in the hall, and a large, rosy woman came bustling in, saying in a cheery voice as she sat a flower pot down upon the table, "Good morning! Nice day, isn't it! Came in early on business and brought you one of my Lady Washingtons, you are so fond of flowers.

"Oh, it's lovely! How kind you are. Do sit down if you can find a chair; we are all behind hand today, for I was up half the night with poor baby, and haven't energy enough to go to work yet," answered Mrs. Bennett with a sudden smile that changed her whole face, while baby stopped fretting to stare at the rosy clusters, and Polly found employment in exploring the pocket of the new comer as if she knew the way there.

"Let me put the pot on your stand first, girls are so careless, and I am proud of this. It will be an ornament to your parlor for a week," and opening the door, Mrs. Gay carried the plant to a sunny bay-window where many others were blooming beauti-

Mrs. Bennett and the children followed to talk and admire, while the servant leisurely cleared the table.

"Now give me that baby, put your-self in the easy chair and tell me all about your worries." said Mrs. Gay, in the brisk commanding way which few people could resist."

"I'm sure I don't know where to be gin," sighed Mrs. Bennett, dropping into the comfortable seat, while the baby changed bearers with great composure.

"I met your husband and he said the doctor had ordered you and those chicks off to Florida for the winter.

John said he didn't know how he should manage it, but he meant to try."

"Isn't it dreadful! He can't leave his business to go with me, and we shall have to get Aunt Mirinda to come and see him and the boys while I'm gone, and the boys can't bear her strict, old-fashioned ways, and I have got to go that long journey all alone and stay strangers, and these heaps of fall work to do first, and it will cost an immense sum to send us, and I don't know what is to become of me.'

Here Mrs. Bennett stopped for breath, and Mrs. Gay asked briskly, "What is the matter with you and these children?"

"Well, baby is having a hard time with his teeth and is croupy. Polly doesn't get over scarlet fever well, and I'm used up; no strength or appetite, pain in my side and low spirits. An entire change of scene, milder climate, and less work for me, is what we want, the doctor says. John is very anxious about us, and I feel regularly discour-

"I'll spend the day and cheer you up a bit. You just rest and get ready for a new start tomorrow; it's a saving of time to stop short now and then and see what to begin next. Bring me the most pressing job of work; I can sew and see to this little rascal at the same time.

As she spoke off went Mrs. Gay's bonnet, and by the time her hostess had returned with the overflowing work basket, the energetic lady had put a match to the ready laid fire on the hearth, rolled up a couch, table and easy chair, planted baby on the rug with a bunch of keys to play with, and sat blooming and smiling to herself, as if work, worry and November weather were not in existence.

Tot's frocks and Polly's aprons are the things I am most hurried about; they need so many, and I do like my children to look nice among strangers, began Mrs. Bennett, unrolling yards upon yards of ruffling, for the white frocks and pinafores, with a glance of despair at the sewing machine whose click had grown detestable to her ear.

"Make them plain if you are in a hurry; children don't need trimming up, they are prettiest in simple clothes. can finish off that batch of aprons before dinner, if you will put that ruffling away. Come, now do, it will be a load off your mind, and Polly won't know the difference.

"I always do trim them, and every one does," began Mrs. Bennett, who was wedded to her idols. "When I was in London I saw a duke's children dressed in plain brown er seen such splendid babies. Try it and if people make remarks bring in er seen such splendid babies. Try it and if people make remarks bring in upon. Put the covers on your furnilinen pinafores, and I thought I'd nevthe English aristocracy, and it will be

"Take them out with you. Roll baby and let Polly run before, and you'd be a different set of people in a month." "Do you really think so?"

"Not only that, but if you'd change your way of living, I don't believe you need to think of going to Florida at all.

"I have often wanted to say this before, and now I will, though you may think I'm an interfering woman if I do. Never mind, if I can only save you ing, I won't mind if you are offended for a time. In the first place you must move," and Mrs. Gay gave such a decided nod that the other lady could only ejaculate. "Why? where? when?"

"Because you want more sun and space, into this room because you will find both, and to-day because I'm here to help you?"

Mrs. Bennett gave a little gasp and looked about her in dismay at the bare idea of living in her cherished best par-more oppressive than ever.

"A good cry" was pending when there came a brisk ring at the front she protested. "It is warm and small she protested." and handy to the kitchen and we always live there."

"No, my dear, in does not do very well, for those very reasons. It is too warm and small and near the kitchen to make it a fit place to live in, especially for little children. Why don't you put your plants there if it is such a nice place?" asked Mrs. Gay, bent on making a clean sweep of her friends delusions and prejudices.

"Why, they need more sun and air and room, so I keep them in here.

Exactly! and your babies need sun and air and room more than your roses, geraniums and callas. The plants would soon die in that close, hot, dark north room; do you wonder your babies are pale and fretful and weak? Bring them in here and see how soon they will bloom if you will give them a chance."

"I never thought of that. I'm sure I would do anything to see them well and hearty, but it seems a pity to spoil my nice parlor. Wouldn't the best chamber overhead do as well?"

"I want that too for your bedroom, and the little one at the side for the children. You use the back chamber now, and have the cribs there also, don't you?' "Yes. My patience! Mary, would you have me turn the house upside down just for a little more sun?"

"Do you love your best rooms better than your children. Hadn't you rather see them spoilt by daily use than empty and neat, because the little busy feet were gone never to come back? I'm in earnest, Lizzie, and I know you over. My own dear little boy was kill- time. ed by my ignorance, and I have learned by sad experience that we mothers should make it the study of our lives to make home healthy and happy for our boys and girls; no matter how Come now, try it for a month, and see ing the best and sunniest side of life.

Mrs. Bennett's eyes wandered round the pretty room, and went from Polly had made, though, he, being a man, singing to herself as she sat looking could never know how great a one it out of the pleasant window, to baby contentedly playing bo-peep through the bars of the fender with the yellow flames, which were his delight, then came back to her friend's kind, earnest face, and seemed to wake with sudden energy and life and resolution.

"I'll try it," she said, feeling that it was a heroic thing to give up all her cherished ideas and put her Sunday best things into every-day wear. Mrs. Gay's words touched and startled her, and with a self-reproachful pang she resolved that it should never be said that she loved her plants more than her children, or that the house should ever miss the sweet clamor of baby voices if she had the power to keep the music there.

"Good! I knew you would, and I'm going to show you how easy it will be to change the climate you live in as well as the scene, away." cried Mrs. Gay delighted with her success, and eager to see her reform well carried

Working and talking busily together the friends soon made the necessary changes below to the great delight of Polly and the entire bewilderment of baby, who fell asleep on the best sofa, as if bound to make the most of his comforts while they lasted.

Mary, I have been a goose, and I'm glad you came and told me so.

Contented with that confession, Mrs. Gay kissed her convert, and leaving Biddy to finish off, she took her departure with many last injunctions about "air, oat-meal, brown bread, quiet living and sunshine."

When Mr. Bennett and the boys, who had been enjoying a holiday, came home to tea, amazement fell upon them at the sight of mamma and the babies sitting in the new sitting-room, with the announcement that there was not going to be any best parlor any more.

When the events of the day had been explained and discussed a sort of jubilee ensued; for they all felt that a pleasant change in the domestic atmosphere had taken place, and all enjoyed it immensely. Mrs. Bennett had her moments of regret as she saw the marks of little fingers on her paint and furniture, watched the fading of her carpet, and labored vainly to impress upon the boys that whittling, ball and marbles had better be confined to the dining-room. But the big, pleasant parlor was so inviting with the open air, the comfortable chairs, flowers, babies, work and play. that no one could resist the charm, and tired papa found it so attractive that he deserted the little library set apart for him, and spent his evening in the bosom of his family, to his great delight.

People got into the way of dropping in, not for a formal call in the prim pest parlor, but a social visit with gossip and games, music, or whatever was going on, and soon it was generally agreed that the Bennett house was the pleasantest in the neighborhood.

His Wife Did "Go In."

He had returned with his wife from a summer vacation at the seaside, and he stood in front of the house giving a friend a graphic account of the season's pleasures.

"Went in bathing every day!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "Ah," responded the friend. "Wife go in, too?"

"Oh, yes, every day, said the returned vacationist.

"Can she swim?" queried the friend, with some interest.

"No, she can't," was the reply. "She tried and tried to learn, but somehow, she didn't get the hang of it. She said she couldn't get the right kick, and I let her think that was the reason, but the fact was"-and here he looked up couldn't keep her mouth shut long enough to take four strokes, before she'd have some silly remark to make, when, kerswash, she'd swallow a whole wave, and go plump to the bottom!" and the husband winked rapidly as the scene was recalled to mind, and went into the house chuckling with pleasure.

Angora Rabbits.

The care, breeding and management of rabbits has a great fascination for young persons, while older ones cannot help admiring fine specimens of them, even though they do not have the time or inclination to keep a few themselves. We well remember, in our boyhood days, how happy we were when we became the proud possessor of a pair of rabbits, and how we spent our leisure time, out of school, in building neat houses and runs for them, and afterwards in caring for and breeding them. At one time our flock fell but little short of fifty, but just as we were in the height of our prosperity a couple of dogs broke in one night and cleaned us out thoroughly. Since then we have bred finer rabbits, perhaps, but never more successfully or in as large num-

There are no more handsome varieties of rabbits than well bred specimens of the White Angora. They have long, white, silky fur, are large in size, have pink eyes and upright ears, and are tame and easily raised. If well cared for, they are prolific and will breed many young each year. They possess a still greater recommendation, which is that they can be bought for about half of what you have to pay for choice Lop eared rabbits, fine ones bringing from four to six dollars per pair.—The Pet Stock.

There's a pin sticking in me now, and if I say a word about it I'll be trotted or fed, and would rather have catnip-tea. I'll tell you who I am. I found out to-day. I heard folks say, "Hush, don't wake up Emmeline's baby." That's me. I'm "Emmeline's baby," and I suppose that pretty, white-faced woman over on the pillow is Emmeline.

No, I was mistaken; for a chap was in here just now, and wanted to see Bob's baby, and looked at me, and said I "was a funny little toad, and looked just like Bob." He smelt of cigars, and I'm not used to them. I wonder who else I belong to. Yes, there's another one—that's "Ganma," Emmeline told me, and then she took me up and held me against her soft cheek and said, "It was Ganma's baby, so it was." I declare I don't know who I do belong to; but I'll holler, and may be I'll find

There comes Snuffy with catnip-tea. The idea of giving babies catnip-tea when they are crying for information! I'm going to sleep. I wonder if I don't look pretty red in the face? I feel so. I wonder why my hands won't go where I want them to. I wonder what Snuffy has in that big black bottle, and why she don't give Ganma's baby some.

Here's Bob; he's one of the people I belong to, you know. He kisses me and scratches me with his mouth-I don't wear a mustache myself. I like Ganma. She treats me like a gentleman, and parts my hair on the side; Snuffy parts it in the middle.

I'm a year old, and I've got a name. I'm Jo; and Uncle Jo gave me a silver cup this morning, but they won't let me have it to bang on the table. Grandma would give it to me in a minute, and I think some day, when I catch her alone, I'll get it yet. Cousin Lizzie is staying here. She is Cousin Lizzie is going home soon; I'm sorry; so's Uncle Jo. I heard him tell her so, and then she stooped to tie my sleeve-ribbon, and grew very red in the face about it. That's funny too. But Ganma don't forgetnot she; and she isn't so taken up with this girl-baby that she can't remember a fellow who used to be No. 1. She says my nose is out of joint, but it don't feel broken.

I don't want to be ugly, but I do hate to see the new baby in my place; and I hear them tell her that she is the dearest little dot that ever lived.

They used to tell me just so. And I don't like to see my dear mamma so very still, with her eyes shut.

I knew it was a sorrowful world when I came, and that is why I cried. I've tried to-day to wake dear mamma, and I can not. She will not speak to me, or move, or open her bright eyes. She does not even turn when the baby cries. Both her little hands are laid upon her breast, and full of flowers And Cousin Lizzie and Ganma are all in black frocks, and I've black ribbons on. And Bob sits by her with his head in his hands; and Uncle Jo cries as he stands beside them both, and lays his hand on his shoulder, and says, "God help you, brother." And all the while the sun is shining in the street, and the people go by as they always do. She held me in her arms last night, and kissed me, and said, "Good-by, little Jo." They tell me she has gone to heaven; but it is no comfort to me. I don't know where heaven is, or how to get there. I looked up at the stars, but I liked the shine of mamma's eyes And I wanted her here. I must be good to the baby, and I mean to be; whatever happens, I'm going to stand by that baby.

THE CLAWSON WHEAT.

There has much been said and written about the Clawson wheat. There seems a general desire to know the exact facts about this wheat. It appears to us that Mr. Chamberlain, of Summit county, Ohio, sums up the reports in the best manner for the Country Gentleman. He says: First, the yield, I think is without question higher on the average than that of any other variety. From all parts of the country come well authenticated reports of its yielding this year from forty all the way up to sixty bushels an acre. My own yield by accurate measurement was over 461/2 bush. per acre on ten acres, and on three acres it was a trifle over 60 bushels per acre. When sown side by side with other wheat, it surpasses all, so far as I have seen accurate reports, except the Fultz, and surpasses that, except in one case where both gave the moderate yield (for Clawson) of 30 bushels per acre. And I have seen no records of the Fultz as high as many of the best reported yields of Clawson. In my own field last year it beat the Treadwell ten bushels per acre, both having equal chance.

Second, the quality. It has a splendid large, white berry, but does not harden up as soon after cutting as many other kinds of wheat, and hence does not grind as well at first. But it seasons well either in the mow or granary, or in the flour after grinding. Last year I had my year's flour ground and put in paper sacks immediately after harvest and threshing. At first the bread was not so light, nor so white, as that from the best flour we had been buying. But it improved each week, and by December the bread was fit to set before a king. This year the flour on first grinding seemed not so light and white in the bread at first, and so we mixed it two parts Clawson and one part red wheat, and have splendid bread. The chemical analysis, if I remember, shows that the Clawson lacks in gluten, which most of the red wheats have in abundance. A miller told me that, mixed, they made better flour than either taken separately.

So much from personal knowledge of the Clawson here. Now for a bit of its history elsewhere, and of the history of a few other fruits and vegetables that like the Clawson have shown enormous yields.

Two years ago the Michigan Miller's Association pronounced against it, and graded it below No. 2 red wheat. Now it bears the highest price there, as stated by your correspondent a few days ago. A year ago the New York millers also pronounced against it, and tried to buy it at price of No. 2 red. Now, as stated by your correspondent two or three weeks ago, it bears the highest price in New York State too. This year the Indiana millers followed suit, and said it didn't grind well in Indiana and Ohio, but was prime in Kentucky and Tennessee, &c., and our Ohio leading millers put down the price ten cents or more below No. 1 white wheat. But already I learn that as they become acquainted with the wheat, and it gets seasoned, they change their minds and pay within

Now there has been the same cry against many of the best fruits and vegetables. The Wilson strawberry, the Lawton blackberry, the Concord see how you can leap." At the same out as Ganma's do though. But they showed themselves hardy and very productive, and so the people would raise them and would eat them with a relish in spite of epicures and connoisseurs who said they were unfit for an educated palate. And the grapes and berries, and fruits and grains that are puny and need watching and nursing are forgotten, while these hardy and productive and really good ones yearly grow in favor. For, as Gail Hamilton somewhat wittily remarks, "A beet that will grow is better than a cedar of Lebanon that won't grow."

> A Boston family has a remarkably intelligent parrot, which repeats nearly everything it hears, and which some bad boys have taught to swear awfully. It finally did little talking except of a profane character, and to cure its propensity was repeatedly soused in cold water and placed near the stove to dry. During a recent storm some chickens which had become very wet and chilled were brought into the house and put by the stove to revive them. It so happened that the parrot had just been ducked himself, and after surveying the chickens for some time, he cried out in oracular tones: "Little d—d fools, been swearing!"

In accordance with a hallowed custom ob served by the people of this State annually since its organization, and now honored by observance throughout the nation, I hereby designate Thursday, the 28th Day of the Present Month as a Day of Thanksgiving and Praise to Almighty God for the peace and good order which have prevailed in our midst, for the large degree of health, contentment and happiness that we have enjoyed, for a bountiful harvest, and for the manifold blessings that have been vouchsafed to us during the present year. To this end I invite all our people on the day designated to rest from their ordinary avo cations, and to assemble at their respective places of public worship, and there, as well as at their fireside circles, with devout gratitude to acknowledge the loving-kindness and great goodness of our Heavenly Father and implore the continuance thereof.

While we thus joy in our blessings, let us not forget by deeds of benevolence to con-fer happiness upon others less favored than

It once the weak bonds that bound the States together were strained to the uttermost. Then came the Fugitive Slave Law and the Missouri Compromise. Emboldened by repeated successes, the South aimed to dictate the entire foreign policy of the United States-and succeeded.

The course of the South was not taken simply because of her love of dominion; the commercial interests of that section of honesty, its courage, and its capacity to meet and overcome the forces of the oppo-vation of slavery but also its courage. vation of slavery, but also its extension, Cotton was the one staple of the South, and the cultivation of cotton, exhausting as it does the life of man and of land, has two requirements,—unskilled labor and new land. The very fact that cotton fast wears out the soil, and that year after year the South was losing while the North was gaining in productiveness, marked a limit to slavery and fixed a point where free labor, fective and congenial purgative ever discovered. They are mild, but effectual in their operation, moving the bowels surely and without pain. Although gentle in their operation, they are still the most thorough and searching cathartic medicine that can be employed: cleansing the stomach and bowels, and even the blood. In small doses of one pill a day, they stimulate the digestive organs and promote vigorous health. AYER'S PILLS have been known for more than a quarter of a century, and have obtained a world-wide reputation for their virtues. They correct diseased action in the several assimilative organs of the body, and are so composed that obstructions within their range can rarely withstand or evade them. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of everybody, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are, at the same time, the safest and best physic for children. than the common purgatives, and never give pain when the bowels are not inflamed. They reach the vital fountains of the blood. and strengthen the system by freeing from the elements of weakness.

Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel nor any deleterious drug, these Pills may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar-coating preserves them ever fresh, and makes them pleasant to take: while being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity. PREPARED BY

RAILROAD PROSPECTS.—Mr. James F. Joy recently had an engagement with a Chicago reporter, with the following result:

"Mr. Joy stated that there is not the least likelihood that the Detroit, Lansing and Northern will, in any event, be used by the Grand Trunk as a connection between Lansing and Detroit with the Chicago and Lake Huron for a Chicago outlet, but he thinks that the Detroit, Hillsdale and Southwestern, in connection with the Eel River and Baltimore and Ohio, will eventually be used by the Grand Trunk for a Chicago outlet.

—Croaking is not confined to the Frog Ponds. At this season almost everybody is hoarse. The bleating of distressed lungs is hoar that the Detroit, Hillsdale and Southwest-ern, in connection with the Eel River and Baltimore and Ohio, will eventually be used by the Grand Trunk for a Cnicago outlet. There only remains a short distance between Detroit and Ypsilanti to be built to make the line complete, and when the funds wherewith to build this gap have all been secured, the work will be commenced.

CATTLE Snow.—The Chicago Fat Stock Show will be held in the exposition building, Chicago, December 2-7, 1878. The prizes are distributed as follows: Cattle, $2,350; Sheep, $725; Swine, $600; Fat Poultry and wild Game, $170. In addition to the above the National Live Stock Journal, of Chicago, offers challenge cups as follows: Best Beef animal, $100; Best Fat Sheep, $50; Best Fat Hog, $50. YPSILANTI, NOV. 23, 1878.

The Greenbackers wish somebody would play the same game on the remains of their lifeless party as has been practiced on those of the late Mr.

Even in Georgia it seems that the Democracy had to resort to fraud as well as intimidation to keep the State solid in Congress. There is good evidence that Wade, Republican, was really elected to Congress in the Third District by fully 3,000 majority, but that large margin was overcome, after the polls closed, by deliberately throwing out enough Republican votes to return the Democratic candidate.

PRESIDENT HAYES looks with much disgust and a little indignation at the proceedings of the southern democracy in the South Carolina, Louisiana, and other elections. They have the entire political machinery now in their hands, and there can be no pretense of the slightest interference or intimidation by the federal government or any other According to an editorial in the Washington National Republican of Nov. 13, the President declares that his experiment in maintaining justice, equality, and freedom, through the confederates, is a complete failure. Believing that the rights of American citizenship have been grossly violated, the president is determined that they shall be vindicated, and that a vigorous prosecution of the offenders shall take place. Already many arrests are announced for obstructing the U. S. supervisors of election in South Carolina and Louisiana.

The Lessons of the Past.

Some of the fiat-mongers are predicting awful catastrophes from resumption. History is all against them. The first step of relief from the panic of 1837 was resumption of specie pay-As soon as that was taken capital lifted up its head in confidence, enterprise began to start, and labor soon found its accustomed demand and reward. Just so was it in 1857. As soon as honest money was the basis of business, thrift followed, prosperity was enkindled on every hand and the voice of discontent was hushed. So it will be now. Croakers can do much to hinder a return to better times, but the laws of trade and finance will prove too powerful for even them. When a merchant's protested paper has long kept him under water, the moment it is off his back he comes to the top and swims again in the stream of prosperity. So long as he cannot pay, nobody wants his notes; but when he is ready to meet them at call, the banks and everybody else want them. Just so it is with the Government notes. This is all there is of it. There is no mystery about it

Something to be Considered.

"One hundred thousand Democratic majority, and perfect quiet," says one dispatch from South Carolina. This is the State, let us remember, which, as Mr. Tilden's confidential agent reported in cipher to him, actually gave a majority of its votes in favor of Republican electors in 1876. Within two years, when the Republican votes at the North have greatly increased, have half of the Republican voters of South Carolina been converted to Democracy? Or is it conceivable that the entire Republican vote was voluntarily withdrawn; that 90,000 free citizens, who voted for Rainy, Cain, Smalls and other Republican candidates for Congress two years ago, have now unanimously refused to vote for the same and similar candidates? Let the question be seriously and carefully considered by the citizens of Northern States. It involves something immeasurably more important than the success or failure of either party in a single State or Congressional election. There can be no better time to consider it than this. The Democrats have control of the State government, and every member of the Legislature except three, it is said, and every Representative in Congress. Whatever they wanted in South Carolina they have secured. Nor is there any Congressional committee by which the Democratic methods in South Carolina will be investigated. But those methods will nevertheless be examined, and anxiously, by the people of the north, where fredom exists and the Constitution is obeyed.—N. Y. Tri-

The Election and the Party.

The complete returns from the election in this State will show not only the disintegration of the Democratic party, but the substantial integrity in point of numbers as well as principle of the Republican party. It is true that in some counties the latter suffered from the insidious work of the National emissaries, and that its total vote is not as large as that polled for Hayes in the last Presidential election. by heavy rains But the vote in 1876 was exceptionally large, the interest felt in the election being intense in both parties. The totol vote for Governor Crosswell this year in the 69 counties from which we have full returns is 124,949. The remaining seven counties will increase this to something over 126,000, and the Democratic vote to about 79,000. This Republican vote has never been exceeded except in Presidential years. The following table gives the Republican and Democratic totals of the State in all fall elections from 1868 inclusive: Year. 98,068 1868, President..... 1870. Governor . . 136,199 1874, Governor. 1876. President.

The Republican vote is thus shown to be 26,000 larger than in 1870, and nearly 15,000 larger than in 1874, while the Democratic vote is 4,000 less than in 1870 and 26,000 less than in 1874. The Democratic in vote for Governor has not been as small as it is this year since 1866, when Williams had 67,706. Besides all this, the Republicans are united and well equipped for future contests, while the opposition are divided in sentiment and inharmonious in their counsels. The future of Republicanism was never brighter in this State than at present. Post and Tribune in a circular of congratulation and thanks just issued by the Republican State Central Committee, is this just summary of the completeness and the significance of the Michigan victory:

The campaign has closed with a triumphant victory for honest money and Republican principles. Michigan will be represented in the next Congress by an unbroken Republican delegation. The Republican State ticket has a plurality of over 40,000 votes, and such Democratic strong-holds as Wayne, Saginaw, Marquete, Monroe Oakland and Livingston counties have been stormed with gratifying success, leaving the op-position demoralized, dispirited and in a shattered condition. The Republican party stands as the pronounced and successful defender of not only the integrity of the Union and the rights of humanity, but as the victorious champion of the national honor. It has set its seal of condemnation on false financial theories and repudiation of national obligations. It has strengthened public faith and credit, and hastened the era of returning prosperity.

It deserves the confidence and commendation of all patriotic citizens, first for having adoped right principles, and second, for having successfully main-tained them. In the vigor of its youth it crushed armed traitors and preserved the Union. In its equally vigorous manhood it has proven its honesty, its courage, and its capacity to meet and overcome the forces of the opposition, of whatever name or description. As in the past, so in the future, the Republican party expects to enlist in support of free constitutional government the earnest and united efforts of our most intelligent, honest and patriotic Village Wells.

Many of our readers dwell in villages and to all of them we commend the warning contained in the following extract from the Christian Union:

Twenty-five bottles of various sizes stood on a druggist's back shelf yesterday. There may be thirty to-day, for daily additions are made. Most of them contain a pinkish colored liquid, more or less bright. Some are colorless. They are samples of water from the wells and cisterns of our village and of other villages. A few drops of permanganate of potassa give the pink If the water is impure it bleaches out the color, and any organic mat-ter it may hold is precipitated to the bottom. Here is a bottle from a well in Seneca Falls. It is colorless, and there is a thick deposit on the bottom. The family using this water has been sick all summer. Here is water from a family well, used by a family where the wife and mother has just died from typhoid fever. It has some color, but there is a large deposit at the bottom. Here is water from a well that supplied a family whose little children lie dead. There are many bottles sent in by those alarmed at the sickness and death among their neighbors. A very few are bright in color and free from sediment, but the most are more or less changed and with more or less deposit. People are waking up to the fact that village wells are as a rule unsafe and impure, and now that a long continued drought has reduced the water and concentrated the poison, this fact is brought sharply into light. It is now the fashion to boil your water before using it; to drink weak cold tea; and, we are sorry to say, the users of strong drink now have a new argument against the use of cold water.

This is no new thing; villages in England, and the older the worse, have been found to be far less healthy than cities—some of them in fact almost fever hospitals, and that, notwithstanding their great superiority to cities in point of fresh air, sunshine, and rural scenery. The one drawback which counterbalanced all advantages, was unwholesome water, drawn from wells into which the soakage from cesspools and dunghills precolated. There are four remedies for this danger: 1st, to construct a tank or cistern for each house, sufficiently large for the wants of the family, and collect in it the water that flows from the roof of the dwelling-house. Water from heaven is always pure. 2. To sink a tube till it strikes water—perhaps thirty or forty feet or more—the deeper the safer from surface soakage, and raise all the water you want by a force pump.

3. If there is a clear stream in your neighborhood water may be brought from that; but many streams are poisonous by decaying vegetable matter, and now the additional danger is experienced of Paris green being swept from adjoining potato fields into the streams

4. The best remedy of all is for the village to grow so large that it will be able to establish a system of waterworks, bringing the water from some clear stream or lake on a higher level f possible, and if not, pumping it from the best stream or lake in the vicinity.

The mills of United States justice grind slow, but they do grind. The prosecutions in Utah for bigamy have been waiting for the trial of the Mountain Meadow massacre cases, which was first necessary to reestablish confidence in civil authority. The bigamy cases are now going on under a statute passed 16 years ago.

land, Thomas Ahearn, has been set at archy."

THE TRUE POLICY OF THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

It was in 1873, at Grand Rapids, that the price of admission to the annual State Fair was increased from 25 to 50 cents. The consequence was an immense revenue. The society, after paying large expenses and $4,000 borrowed money, left Grand Rapids with a surplus of $14,020.44. From that time forward the eagles have gathered around this surplus. That explains many things.

The time has certainly come for a return to the old and popular admission fee. The flush days of high prices are gone. Everything has returned to the solid basis of the old ante-war times. Look at the prices of farm produce, which were never lower. Look at the price of clothing, of household furniture, of all cotton and woollen goods, and we find that the bottom has been touched. Then why should not the State Agricultural Society recognize the change and shrinkage, and place its entry fee at the old standard?

Fairs, to be of any benefit, should be seen by the whole people. There should be no favorites. Prices should be reasonable, so that all trades and professions can avail themselves of this educational opportunity. Thousands of poor artizans and mechanics are kept from the fair by the high and ex-orbitant price of admission. Fifty cents is exorbitant. It is out of the reach of many worthy people. The mechanic who is supporting a large family hesitates at fifty cents. He cannot afford it. Put it at twenty-five cents-coupon ticket-or five for a doliar, and he will go twice with his whole family. Do away with all complimentary tickets, except to the press. Let everyone pay a small, reasonable price for admission and the fairs will be crowded, and there will be revenue enough for all purposes, premiums and expenses. What propriety is there in charging a farmer one dollar for himself and wife, admission to a fair, when a bushel of wheat won't pay for the two tickets.

The fact is that high admission rates to any fair, concert, lecture, show, or theatre, should be repudiated by the entire community. People are paying more than they can afford to—more than they ought to—more than they will. Reasonable prices are going to be the paying prices. People like amusement and seek instruction, but not at imposition rates. The State Agricultural Society should catch the spirit of the times and reduce its price of admission to its old rates. Another and the next reform should be a permanent and safe investment of a portion of the surplus now in the treasury of the State Agricultural Society. The surplus last January, at the settlement at the Russel House, for 1877, was $9,000. The surplus, when all expenses are paid, for 1878, will not be less than $15,000. A portion of this say $5,000, should be invested in safe government bonds. Why not lay up a small sum for a rainy day? If this policy had been adopted five years ago at the close of the Grand Rapids fair, the society might have had $10,000, yes, more, in government bonds. The state society of New York has invested a large amount, in bonds, popular government loan, at 4 per cent, affords facilities for investment which should be embraced by the so-ciety. The society should be an ex-ample to the people. The Fair is an exhibition of the products of the State. Here we show the stock, the manufactures, the machines, the machinery, the cereals of the state a surplus of $15,000. We will show you how to invest it like prudent men and we will put $5,000 in government bonds. Why not? The balance in the treasury should command some inter-

Another policy which should be changed at once is the cheeky and audacious one—the policy of the begging, perambulating tramp; which begs at Grand Rapids, which begs at East Saginaw, which begs at Jackson, which begs at Kalamazoo, which begs $10,000 at Detroit. It is well enough to ask for the proper grounds, suitable for exhibition purposes, but it appears to us that a society well conducted, with a large surplus on hand, commanding heavy revenues, should beg no further, but should erect its own buildings without putting itself up at auction every year to the highest bidder. It should erect its own buildings at Jackson, at Kalamazoo, at Grand Rapids, at East Saginaw, and at Detroit, have the grounds donated, and this annual humiliating spectacle of begging from and bleeding the people of thousands of dollars for building purposes should cease. We think it will cease. The people are sick of and disgusted

The policy is one of gross and grinding extortion. The society begs like a tramp for all it can get to erect build-It charges an exorbitant rate for admission. The surplus brings not a cent of interest.

The society should not be a burden to the people. It should ask for grounds and then should erect its own buildings, which should be spacious and durable. It should charge only reasonable rates at the gates, and the people will respond in such numbers as to keep the revenue sufficient and sound. The surplus should be husbanded as a prudent man does his own.—Michegan Homestead.

Mr Gladstone does not think any better of the policy of the English gov ernment in the far East than he did of its jugglery at Berlin. He justified the displeasure of the Ameer at the Brit ish occupation of Quettah, and declar ed that the weak power, which a professedly chivalrous government threatened to punish for receiving a Russian embassy, was less culpable than the sender of the embassy. In conclusion he said that what the people are now protesting against, is not merely a series of false steps, "but the new system of government by the personal responsibility of a sovereign which is only too At last the Fenian prisoner in Eng- likely to seal the foundation of mon-This sounds a little like sedi-

THE HOUSEHOLD. Buckwheat Cakes.

Now comes the season of buckwheat cakes, for which nearly everybody has a relish and which are required to be served at least once a day during the winter months. We must confess we have not the prejudice against buckwheat that prevails in some hygiene circles. Used in moderation we believe the cakes to be healthful, appetizing, and excellent for a change. One thing is certain, very few are left over. With Oliver the cry comes up from the children for ".more."

The griddle must now be brought out and washed off hard with hot soap and water and then wiped and rubbed well with dry salt. It is now ready to heat and grease with a bit of fat salt pork. Avoid too much grease—a piece of pork an inch square should last for a week. Buckwheats should be of good size and each cake should consist of a large spoonful of batter. Good cooks always try their griddle first with a single cake to be sure that all is right with both batter and griddle. hot plate should always be ready for the cakes. There are many recipes for buckwheat cakes. We will give ours for a breakfast for a large family: One quart of buckwheat flour; four tablespoonfuls of yeast; one teaspoonful of salt; one handful of Indian meal or Graham flour, we prefer the latter; two tablespoonfuls of good common molasses, add warm water enough to make a thin batter, then beat well and set to rise in a warm place. Is your batter sour in the morning: then stir in a very little soda dissolved in hot water. An earthen crock is best to mix in, and be careful and not use it all but leave a little in the bottom each morning for sponge for the next night, instead of getting fresh yeast; you can pursue this plan during the winter for a week or ten days each run, then setting a new supply. Add fresh flour, salt, mo-lasses, each night. Instead of Graham flour or Indian meal, some use onethird fine oat meal and two-thirds buckwheat. One of these three, Graham Indian, or oat-meal, should always be used in the buckwheat cakes. We believe Graham to be the best. A syrup made of sugar is a nice dressing, though we have found honey to be delicious and healthful.

The Use of Honey.

Speaking of honey for buckwheat cakes, we desire to commend its daily use to every family in the land. believe it to be one of the most health ful sweets that can be found, and well adapted to common use. It seems to us very desirable that Michigan should produce a large share of her own table sweets. Could honey be brought into general use, thereby creating a home market for it, we believe it would tend to encourage the culture and produc-tion of honey. Prof. Cook, our own State apiarist, of whom we are so proud, says Michigan is naturally adapted to the production of honey. Let Michi-gan people use it, put it on the table every day. It must be a healthy sweet for children, and children must have sweets, just as the Irishman must have potatoes. The honey-bee feeds upon the healthy juices of healthy plants, and honey must partake of the quality of the blossoms of the plants and trees from which it is gathered. Our attention has recently been called to this subject by the honey furnished us by the young apiarist, who is a professor at the German American Seminary, De-He is commonly known as Frank Benton. He sells us nice honey or 15 cents per pound, and we really ling, and the Sunday believe it is as cheap as the high-priced syrups. The use of this article should become so common and general that a honey store or depot, would be found profitable in every large town. We beieve in encouraging the bee-men and women, and if every family in the land was on the banks, among them a band would make honey an article of daily of Choctaw Indians. The creek, not use, in place of the unhealthy syrups,

SOME PRACTICAL REMARKS.—A girl that is never allowed to sew, all of whose clothes are made for her and put on her until she is 10, 12, 15, or 18 years of age, says the Lady's Journal, is spoiled. The mother has spoiled her by doing everything for her. The true idea of self-restraint is to let the child venture. A child's mistakes are often better than its no mistakes; because when a child makes mistakes and has to correct them, it is then on the way to knowing something. child that is waked up every morning, and never wakes itself up; and is dressed, and never makes mistakes in dressing itself; and is washed, and never makes mistakes about being clean; and is fed, and never has anything to do with its food; and is watched, and never watches itself; and is cared for, and kept all day from doing wrong—such a child might as well be a tallow candle, perfectly straight, and solid, and comely, and unvital; and good for nothing but to be burned up

OATMEAL.—We call the attention of our fair readers to the advantages of oatmeal as an article of diet. We advise each one of them to make a personal test of its virtue by eating it every morning at breakfast. It is by no means unpalatable, when thoroughly boiled, made of right consistency and taken with sugar and cream. We promise great benefit from its persistent use. In the first place it will improve the complexion by its healthy action on the blood. It will also produce an enviable degree of plumpness from its richness in nutriment for brain and muscle. It will keep the system in good condition, and leave he brain unclogged to do its work. Let it be tried, and we venture to say it will become a daily favorite in every household; and any family will find themselves a thousand fold compensated for the experiment by the better development and better health of the children and an improvement in all.

Look out for sawdust. It is a dangerous article to strew on floors, or to keep in any quantity in combustible places. When impregnated with oil or grease, sawdust is prone to spon- the recent canvass. One Friday even-

English papers ing a politicial procession invaded a report a case where sawdust had fallen from time to time through a crevice in the floor, accumulating in a heap between the beams; that it absorbed mass-meeting was to be held. The some spilled oil, burst into a flame, and torch-bearers, headed by a brass band, nearly destroyed the building.

Milk is found to form an excellent solvent for quinine, and also to disguise, in a measure, the bitterness of that drug. It will be found particularly useful in administering quinine to children. Five grains in a tumbler of milk is almost tasteless.

REMOVING SPOTS FROM CLOTHING. -The following recipes are well recommended: Grease-On white goods soap, water or alkalies. On colored cotton goods, hot soap water. On colored woolen goods, soap water or ammonia. On silk, benzine, ether, ammonia, magnesia, chalk or whites of eggs. Lay the goods on clean bibulous paper and rub on the detergent with a clean sponge. Wine and fruit stains, red ink—On white goods, moisten the spot and expose it to the fumes of burning sulphur, hot weak solution of chloride of lime or bleaching powder. On colored goods of cotton and wool, warm soap water or ammonia. Same for silk; rub carefully. Vinegar, fruit, acids, mould-On white goods, a weak hot solution of bleaching powder. On colored goods of cotton and wool and silk, ammonia. Rust, black ink—On white goods, solution of oxalic acid, or weak muriatic acid. On colored goods either cotton or wool, wash repeatedly with lemon juice. No remedy for silk. Tar, wagon grease—Soap, turpentine, jet of water, alternately. Use benzine for silk instead of turpentine.

GRAHAM GEMS .- One large cupful of sour milk; one teaspoonful of soda; one half cupful of sugar; stir thick with Graham flour; bake in gem cups

An exchange says that if a shirt bosom or other article has been scorched in ironing, laying it awhile in the bright sunshine will take the discolored spot entirely out.

REMEDY FOR BLACK TEETH:-Take equal parts of cream of taratr and salt; pulverize them finely, and mix well. Then wash your teeth in the morning, and rub them with this powder. Afterward, keep your stomach free from fetid gases.

Beeswax and salt will make your rusty flat-irons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag, and keep it for that purpose. When irons are hot, rub them first with the wax-rag, then scour with a paper or cloth sprinkled with salt.

This is an old-fashioned recipe for an Indian pudding: One quart of milk, one small cup of Indian meal stirred in while the milk is hot, let it cool and add one egg; molasses to sweeten; butter, half the size of an egg; cinnamon and salt to your taste; bake three quarters of a hour.

To CLEAN BOTTLES:-Cut a new potato into small pieces and put them in the bottle, along with a tablespoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of water. Shake all well together in the bottle till every mark is removed, and rinse with clean water. This will remove green marks of vegetation and other discolorations. Hard, crusted bottles may be cleaned off by rinsing with water and small shot.

After Mark had been dipped, Dr. Fontaine made the cross on his forehead, and just then came a sound, and a Choctaw had taken a running leap and plunged head under into the deepest of the stream. As he arose he made a cross on his face, and said with a grunt, "Hell's gone!" Dr. Fontaine had delivered an affecting sermon on the bank of the creek, and this Indian had understood it. He baptized himself. They all shook hands, and the Indian returned to his tribe a converted man.—Reidsville (N. C.) Times.

Jean Cavalier was ten years old; his cradle had been rocked to the howl of the mountain storms; he was accustomed to scale heights with fearless agility, being sure footed on paths that and the mountain-born could safely tread, and he now dauntlessly faced a hazardous ride and the peril of imprishazardous ride and the peril of impris-enment to save the lives of five hundred Christian men and women. It was nearly noon; all the huts, sheepcotes, and cottages in the lower adjoining valleys were deserted by their inhabitants, who had started at dawn for the secluded mountain of Bourges, there to seek consolation and strength in the worship of God.

This was the period of the so-called "religious" war in France, which lasted twenty years, and in which the King, Louis XIV., employed sixty thousand soldiers to exterminate three thousand Protestants, because they persisted in worshiping their Maker in their own fashion. Through the upper valleys, for some weeks previous to the time of this story, there had been found, in rock cavities and hallow trees hits of in the desert," and with certain symbolic marks whereby all the faithful knew that the great pastor, Brousson, emerging from his secret cavern dwelling, would meet and minister to his ing, would meet and minister to his persecuted flock in the afternoon of the first day of the year 1703, at the Bourges Mountain. Notwithstanding all precaution, news of the intended convocation had reached the town of Hais, and Captain Daiguirrier, with six hundred men, was coming up from the plain, eager to surprise and butcher the innocent congregation,—a kind of achievement not unfrequent in those tragic years.
Just before noon to-day, Jean, when climbing the rock back of his father's hut in search of a missing goat, spied the red bonnets of the cavalcade, traversing a defile far below; he knew well bering the intelligence and bravery of their terrible purpose, and, hurrying the young criminal, spared no pains to Twenty minutes later, Jean was riding alone through the dim forest, intently conning the net-work of paths so familiar to him, and trying to choose one by which he could alude and out. one by which he could elude and outstrip the assassins. Issuing at length, from the wood, he paused, hesitating between two routes,—one smoother, though longer,—by which, trusting to his nimble pony, he might speedily arrive, unless overtaken by the troops; the other led through ravines and over the other led through ravines and over the troops. rocks into the very heart of the mountains, and was a hazardous path, even for a skillful climber. If he took the latter, he must abandon his horse and trust his own speed and agility. Finally deciding on the smoother road, he was turning toward it when he heard the sound of a conch-shell, and, on the instant, a flash of scarlet streamed around a spur of the forest. Quickwitted Jean rode at once to meet the advancing soldiers.

"Whither go you?" asked the Cap-"To the upper hills to seek my father," replied Jean.

"This is not a safe country for young-sters like you to travel in alone," said

"You shall come with me," continued the Captain, suspiciously; "so fine a boy must not grow up a rebel. I shall dedicate you to the service of the King and the Church."

Jean made no answer, riding on with his captors, apparently in submissive composure; but the vigilant little fellow, quick in expedients, contrived to fall back gradually, till, when the dismounted troops, painfully climbing, were half-way up a steep ascent, Jean was among the hindmost. A brook wound round the base of the hill, and Jean knew that near the stream was one of those caverns common in a country of volcanic formation, the entrance to which was concealed by thick, clustering bushes. Seizing an oppor-tune moment, the active boy turned his pony, dashed down into the brook, leaped from his steed, and ran into the cavern. Some minutes elapsed before the more clumsy soldiers could descend; arms being present, he was offered a when they reached the stream, the glass of rare old wine by his former when they reached the stream, the pony was scrambling homeward over the rocks, and no trace of his rider was visible. Little Jean tremblingly crouched in his covert during their brief, vain search; but soon, eager for larger prey, the pursuers returned to join the rest of the band.

Not far away, some hundreds of resolute men and women were assembled on a rocky platform amid the desolate hills. Muskets stood near, ready for a sudden call to arms. The solemnity of the place, and the danger always near their worship, had infused their exaltage minds with a sone of the immediate ed minds with a sense of the immediate presence of the super-natural, and the simple-hearted peasants thought the child, Jean, a veritable messenger of heaven.

They quickly dispersed through pass and defile, and when the troops ar-rived, the early stars shone down on the deserted rocks and lonely forest.

Jean joined a party of fugitives, and lived to be a valiant and famous defender of the Protestant faith. RESTORED TO COMPLETE HEALTH .-- Brooks,

Seven years ago. the past Spring, I had a severe attack of Diptheria, which left my lmbs paralyzed and useless, so I was unable to walk or even sit up. Noticing the advertirement of Peruvian Syrup, I concluded to give it a trial, and to my great joy soon found my health improving. I continued the use of the Syrup until three bottles had been used, and was restored to complete health, and have remained so to this day. I attribute my present health entirely to the use of Peruvian Syrup, and hold it in high estimation. I cannot speak too highly in its praise. I have several times recomnended it in cases very similar to my own

STOP DRINKING VINEGAR.

How many young women who have inherited a predisposition to embonpoint have ruined their health by drinking vinegar to reduce their forms to graceful proportions. Allan's Anti-Fat is absolutely harmless. It promotes digestion, and accomplishes its work simply by preventing an undue assimilation of the fatty ingredients of the food. Excessive fatness is a vexatious burden, and there is no longer any excuse for enduring it, since Allan's Anti-Fat is an effectual remedy for this abnormal condition.
